As a former industrial base of China, Changchun City has many old factories to be abandoned. The heritages completely preserved have carried memories of generations. In the renovation design of the Changchun Tractor Factory, we took "Unfinished Symphony" as the theme, used the cultural power of Yanjiyou Bookstore to innovate the times memory, and adapt the sustainable concept into the urban renewal, seeking innovation in heritage conservation and building reuse. The huge dome installation, combined with the spiral staircase, puts the condensed architectural form into the space, creating a ritual sense of time and memory. The design narrates the collision between cultural fashion and industrial power from a unique perspective, showing a different innovation from traditional old renovation projects. The project has also become a model for industrial urban renewal in the Northeast China.
